Secretary Blaine is evidently con ducting the state department on different principle than did Secretary Evarts. The latter was essentially lawyer, and legal precedents had great weight with him. It was claimed that the validity of naturalizations could be attacked in given cases, and this was made to bear heavily against certain persons claiming American citizenship. Blaine holds that naturalization papers afford prima facie evidence of citizenship and must be respected till their validity is disproved. This view is certainly equitable and tends to protect American citizens abroad. If a cent individuals should suffer. At all high before foreign nations.

WILL YOU MISS ME WHEN I'M DEAD ! BY LOREAN.

Will you mas me when I'm dead?

When this proud form is laid in the silent tor
When these active limbs are stiff and cold,
And death has robbed me of my bloom? Eagerly meets you at the door, Will you miss my fond embraces, Will you miss me when I'm no more?

Will you miss my footsteps, so light and free, Will you miss my voice in a kind good-bye, Will you miss the land that clasped thine, Will you miss me when I die?

Will you oftimes visit my earthly bed, And there bring with you some sweet flower, In kind remembrance of your silent friend, And lay it upon my green turfted bower? Longstreet Consul General Heap will Some kind, sympathetic tear, In token of the sad severed friendship, Which we plighted on earth while here?

Will you miss me when I'm dead;
When my presence is forever withdrawn;
When my name has ceased as calling;
Will you miss me when I'm gone? Will you miss our cherished future; When lite's shadows shall have fled; Will you miss a life-long friend; Will you miss me when I'm dead?
